

TWENTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 19, 1844.

SENATE.

A communication was received from the Treasury Department in reference to light-houses. Two from the War Department, one of which was from the Commissioner of Pensions, in reference to naval pensions.

The following petitions were presented:
Messrs. WRIGHT and HUGER, for the remission of duties on railroad iron.

Mr. FAIRFIELD, in reference to French spoils.

Mr. HANNEGAN, for the reduction of postage.

Mr. DAYTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, made a favorable report in the case of Mark Simpson.

The Senate bill for giving lands to improve the Fox and Wisconsin rivers was taken up; and, to obviate the objections raised by Mr. Haywood, Mr. TALLMADGE moved some verbal amendments, changing the word "grant" for the word "appropriate."

These were agreed to, and the bill passed informally by.

MR. McDUFFIE'S BILL.

Mr. EVANS moved to take up the report of the Committee on Finance on the above bill.

Mr. McDUFFIE. If one of those who framed our Constitution could have been present in the debate yesterday, he would have been struck with utter astonishment at finding one of its provisions set up as a barrier to the repeal of the most monstrous, unequal, and oppressive systems of taxation that ever disgraced the legislative annals of any enlightened country. He presumed the Senate would not think that the illustrious framers of the Constitution meant to deal in mere idle words. Their intention was that no bill should originate here for raising revenue by imposing taxation—to raise revenue to put money into the Treasury was one thing, and to impose taxes was another.

The Senator from Maine, (Mr. Evans,) went against all power of the Senate, in connexion with the subject. The Senator from New Hampshire had cited numerous cases where the Senate had exercised the power, and the Senator from Connecticut, (Mr. Huntington,) had answered, and truly, that these were not cases of raising revenue by the imposition of taxes. Suppose we had a secret power of raising revenue—suppose, if you please, that of necromancy, that we could call down treasure from Heaven, or to strike the earth with a naked wand and bring it up from beneath our feet—this would be raising revenue. Our ancestors clearly meant that we should not have the power of imposing taxes upon the people, and regarded in any other light the clause in the Constitution as idle and frivolous. Look at this bill. Does it raise revenue "by its own inherent vigor," to use the language of the Senator from Maine? It is a bill repealing taxes, yet it is to be scouted out of the Senate, and decided before the people, because we have not the power of mitigating their burthens. If it was substantially true that this was a bill for raising revenue, he would give up the argument at once; but what was the fact? It repeals half the existing imports and leaves the other unrepaid. Mr. McD. then replied to the objection of Mr. Huntington, that if an amendment was proposed to this bill to increase taxes, it would be out of the power of the Senate to consider it, by remarking that any other bill might be saddled with inconsistent amendments in the same manner.

He alluded to the Compromise Act and complimented Mr. Clay highly for his part in that matter, which he declared was an act of high moral courage—the greatest he had ever known in all his political experience. He then launched forth against the existing Tariff, which he likened to one of the monsters of antiquity, the head and body a man, and the tail a fish. The forty bale theory was brought up, and a protracted speech was made.

Mr. EVANS next rose, but on motion of Mr. BAYARD, the Senate went into Executive session, remained a short time therein, and adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. VANCE moved a suspension of the rules in order to receive such reports from the Standing Committees as should not give rise to debate. The motion prevailed, two-thirds voting for a suspension of the rules.

A large number of private bills were reported from the several committees.

Mr. HOPKINS, of Va., as Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, in answer to a question put to him by Mr. Adams, was understood to say, that the Committee would report at an early day in answer to the memorials upon the subject.

Mr. OWEN, from the Committee on Roads and Canals, reported a bill for the transfer of the Government stock in the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal. The bill was reported with amendments, and with a recommendation that it do pass. The bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WINTHROP, from the Select Committee on Copy-rights, asked leave to have certain memorials printed. The motion was granted.

TWENTY-FIRST RULE.

The SPEAKER announced the report of the Select Committee on Rules and Orders to be the order of business for the morning hour.

Mr. HUDSON, of Mass., closed his remarks in defence of the right of petition, and in further defence of the position maintained by him, that there was power in Congress to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia. Mr. H. quoted Mr. Madison's opinions to show that slavery was an evil, a curse, and an injury to any State where it existed; and further, that there was power under the Constitution to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia. Mr. H. was cut off in the midst of his speech and in the midst of a sentence.

Mr. SAUNDERS, of N. C., obtained the floor and addressed the House, particularly in reply to Messrs. Hudson, Boardley, and his colleague, Mr. Clingman. Mr. S. acknowledged himself to be in favor of the right of petition, and he would go further than some others and state that the petitioners should have a hearing. And they did have a hearing within the terms of the Constitution when a member rose and presented his petition.

In reply to Mr. Boardley, Mr. SAUNDERS said that that gentleman seemed to be governed in his abolition sentiments by the vox populi at home upon this subject, and if he was disposed, with his associates to deny the ground they had maintained in sustaining the South, he wished to know it. Mr. S. did not wish to make threats, but if slavery was to be abolished in this District, if that was what was now aimed at, it was time for the South to know it, that she might stand to her arms and resist aggression. The morning hour expired before Mr. S. concluded. Several Executive communications, of no great importance, were received.

WESTERN RIVERS.

The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the reference of the above portion of the President's Message, Mr. WINTHROP, of Mass., in the Chair.

Mr. WELLER took the floor in reply to Mr. Stewart, of Pennsylvania, and, after relating one or two silly anecdotes, proceeded to make a direct and offensive assault upon Mr. S. He had fixed the brand of untruth upon his forehead, he said, and then turning to Mr. S., and speaking directly to him, "wear it," said he, "in the service of your master, wear it, wear it, until your forehead is as black as"—

[Here the hammer fell with rapid blows, and the Chairman called the member from Ohio to order.]

Some conversation passed as to what Mr. Stewart had said which justified this attack.

The CHAIR did not hear the remarks which were imputed to Mr. Stewart, but he insisted that the gentleman from Ohio was out of order in addressing himself to that gentleman instead of the Chair.

Mr. MORRIS, of Penn., came to the defence of his colleague, and asked Mr. Weller if he meant to charge him with falsehood.

Mr. WELLER replied that if the other gentleman from Pennsylvania sought a controversy with him, he should not avoid it.

Mr. STEWART said the gentleman seeks to make another issue. He will not answer the question.

Mr. WELLER concluded his slang speech, and Mr. BRINKERHOFF rose, and was recognized by the Chair.

Mr. STEWART earnestly desired leave to make a few remarks; but

Mr. B. declined yielding the floor. He, however had not proceeded longer than a few minutes before he dropped into his seat from faintness; owing to this circumstance, the committee rose, and

The House adjourned.
